Note:

This chapter is a pain in the ass to translate, it involves parallel sentences, a type of poem, that exist since 3000 years in China by this poem, a person make the first sentence and another must make the second sentence that match with the first one and the first person should make a hard sentence to challenge other, like using the same words but with different meaning or just reverse the word and its a new word and the important thing is that the sentence must still make sense its impossible to translate it in english and still sound poetic

So I will translate the poem as good as I can or understand Guess I need some aspinn after this "sigh"
